Welcome Message

Welcome to the world of UK healthcare education where heritage meets innovation to develop the healthcare professionals of tomorrow. We invite partners from China to explore the unparalleled offerings of the UK healthcare education & training sector.

Healthcare systems around the world are increasingly recognising the need for more accessible, affordable and patient-centric services. Tackling these challenges require new, sustainable and adaptable models of care. New models of care need to make more of opportunities to invest in workforce development at all levels and find opportunities to learn from others. The UK is a world-class pioneer in this space.

In the realm of higher education, the UK is a beacon of academic excellence and innovation, drawing students and professionals globally to our prestigious institutions. At the heart of UK higher education is a dedication to provide current and future nurses, doctors, care workers and hospital leaders a transformative learning experience that goes beyond the classroom.

Institutions work with world-class hospitals in the UK to prioritise practical, hands-on learning opportunities that empower students to apply their knowledge in real-world settings. They supplement this with digital platforms, all of which prepare them for the challenges of being a healthcare professional. This experiential and technological approach not only equips students with the necessary skills and competencies but also nurtures a spirit of innovation and adaptability that is essential in today's rapidly evolving healthcare landscape.

The UK's rich history in medical education dates back centuries. With 4 of the top 10 world's top universities in health subjects, 16 medical royal colleges and over 30 Nobel prize winners in medicine, the UK leads the way in delivering world-class healthcare professionals. These institutions work hand in hand with the National Health Service (NHS), the world's largest universal health coverage system with 75 years of experience, as well as a thriving life science ecosystem which is number 1 in Europe for inward investment. All this has created a legacy of excellence and paved the way for the UK to be at the forefront of medical advancements and research. It makes it a hub for cutting-edge technologies and ground-breaking discoveries.

Professional training provided by UK hospitals and healthcare service institutions ensures our healthcare professionals remain at the forefront of medical knowledge and practice, backed by high standards set by industry associations and qualification awarding bodies. The UK champions holistic life-long learning and empowers healthcare professionals to continually develop their skills to the highest standard. The education sector can also provide consultancy services to benefit local hospitals with fresh perspectives, industry insights, and tailored solutions to enhance efficiency, improve skills, and elevate the overall quality of care and teaching provided to patients and students.

The UK is especially adept at forging collaborations between public and private sector, academia and professional bodies, allowing healthcare organisations to gain new skills and insight at a rapid pace. Their mission goes beyond the transfer of medical information. They also instil the personal values and behaviours that put patients at the heart of health services.

This also means that the UK has a long-standing tradition of welcoming international collaboration and partnership. I firmly believe in the importance of global dialogue and exchange in advancing healthcare practices and learning. As such, UK Government is committed to working closely with partners from China to forge mutually beneficial relationships that transcend borders and cultures.

Please talk to us and our delegation for potential partnerships. Together, let's embark on a transformative journey of learning, innovation, and collaboration that will shape the future of healthcare for generations to come.

Organisation Introduction

The University of Birmingham has one of the largest medical schools in the UK and a large and extensive biomedical research landscape, with a strong translational medicine imperative (including being one of the most significant clinical trials centres in Europe). Healthcare education encompasses MBChB, Pharmacy, Nursing, Dentistry, Public Health etc. and also healthcare-related disciplines such as Health Data Science, and a variety of other relevant PGT programmes such as Immunology & Immunotherapy, Biomaterials, Clinical Trials, etc.

The University is very deeply engaged with China for over a decade, both in education and research. This is especially the case in the healthcare arena. Examples where the University has had considerable success include the delivery of training in primary care (including establishing 6 model GP practices in Guangzhou), establishment of large patient cohorts (eg middle age and birth cohorts, both numbering in excess of 50000 individuals), and clinical trials capability training and delivery of trials (eg on child obesity in primary schools, involving 60000 children). Thanks to the wide range of research partnerships in China, including the institute of healthy ageing in partnership with the Sun Yat-sen First Affiliated Hospital in Guangzhou, have a rare disease institute with the West China Hospital in Chengdu, a brain health institute in collaboration with South East University in Nanjing involving imaging technology and data analysis, and an AMR project, funded by UKRI-NSFC, we have developed joint PhD and post Doc education. We will also collaborate closely with the Huazhong University of Science and Technology in cross-disciplinary education in biomedical science leading to dual bachelor and master degrees.

As one of the largest institutes in Medical College, the Institute of Applied Health Research (IAHR), leads some of the most high profile collaborations with China including Chinese Health Authorities and Universities. We have also delivered training programmes, both in the UK and China, to over 500 health service managers, 4,000 doctors and 1,000 GP trainers. They have come from at least 25 provinces and 30 medical schools. With flexible articulation models, the Institute has already established a number of educational partnerships with Chinese Universities that allow integration of each university's excellence in these study areas and provides a high-quality learning experience for students in UK.

Our activities with China are supported through dedicated senior leadership (Prof Frampton, DPVC), support teams in both Birmingham and on the ground in China (China Office in Guangzhou, presently with 12 staff) and an overarching 'China Institute', Directed by Prof Frampton.
